Like nursing, it provides ongoing quality round the clock and round the world.' Sylvia Denton OBE, President of the Royal College of Nursing

This new edition of The Royal Marsden Hospital Manual of Clinical Nursing Procedures, sixth edition, meets the high standards set by the previous editions.

It presents up-to-date, evidence-based expert knowledge, enabling nurses to deliver effective patient-focused care. The book is clear, unambiguous and easy to understand.

Clinical procedures are a fundamental aspect of nursing care so it is essential that they are evidence based. This book provides that evidence while remaining firmly grounded in current day-to-day nursing practice.

Each chapter has been thoroughly revised based on an appraisal of current research and feedback from clinical experts. The procedures have been updated accordingly to ensure that current practice is reflected and nurses are enabled to deliver clinically effective care.

For ease of access, the sixth edition has been reorganised to group chapters on related topics together, e.g.: Drug administration, Elimination, Observations, Pain management, and Personal hygiene. As a result of listening to readers, the manual has been expanded, more illustrations included and new sections added on problem solving associated with procedures, helping nurses during the course of their clinical work.

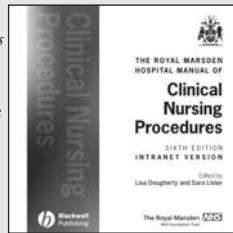

The procedures in this textbook are related to every aspect of a person's care and the real focus of health care is the patient. For patients, the clinical procedure is part of a larger picture which encompasses their unique experience of illness. Nurses have a central role to play in helping patients to manage the demands of the procedures described in this book.

This clinical procedures manual is the book of choice for nurses at all stages of their careers, giving them the confidence they need to be safe, informed and skilled practitioners.

The Royal Marsden Hospital Core Nursing Procedure Cards for Practice-based Learning

Sixth Edition

Edited by Lisa Dougherty and Sara Lister

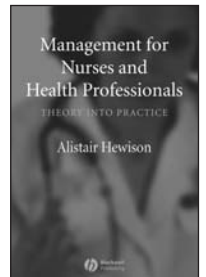

Clinical procedures are an essential component of nursing practice. For the first time, key nursing procedures from the sixth edition of The Royal Marsden Hospital Manual of Clinical Nursing Procedures are brought together in an easy-to-use laminate card format to support the teaching of clinical nursing procedures in a variety of settings. Each procedure guideline card is A4, laminated, hole punched and presented in an A4 ringbinder to enhance accessibility, portability and durability. Divided into two sections, the first section groups together fundamental nursing skills while the second section builds on the skills developed in the first section and introduces more advanced procedures. Each section has been colour coded and number tabbed for ease of use and filing. In general, one procedure or related procedures are featured on an individual card. Over 70 core nursing procedure guidelines are included. These cards can be easily integrated into any education programme and can be used in the skills laboratory, in clinical practice or in the classroom.

Mental Health Care for Nurses

Applying Mental Health Skills in the General Hospital

Mental health is a significant factor in providing effective nursing care for patients in hospital and residential settings. Non-specialist staff often lack the confidence, knowledge and skills to effectively meet the mental health needs of patients who are experiencing psychiatric problems and psychological distress. This book will help them identify and address these needs.

The first part of the book explores the context of mental health care in hospital and residential settings, while the second part explores specific topics such as self-harm and suicide prevention, caring for the patient displaying challenging behaviour, maternal and peri-natal mental health problems, mental health problems associated with old age, mood disorders, and illicit drug and alcohol dependence.

Men's Health

Perspectives, Diversity and Paradox

Mike Luck, Margaret Bamford & Peter Williamson

'This is a very comprehensive book that addresses a vast range of men's health issues...a useful text for those seeking a broad overview of many of the issues related to men's health.' Journal of Advanced Nursing

'Its particular strength is in providing a public health perspective that is distinctly lacking from much of the literature on men's health.' Community Practitioner

The issue of men's health has attracted considerable interest in recent years. Fewer men consult their doctors and men have higher rates of admission to hospital, a widely accepted indicator of serious health problems. In recent years men's health networks have emerged and some research into men's health has been carried out. However, there is still a dearth of material published in book form and this text aims to redress that balance.

This book outlines the development of the field of men's health, discusses men's health and illness and the underlying reasons for the patterns of disease, then looks at existing services and explores how these should be resourced in the future.

Reflexivity

A Practical Guide for Researchers in Health and Social Sciences

Edited by Linda Finlay & Brendan Gough

'I have enjoyed the reflexive journey very much, learned a lot and been excited to learn more. What else can one say of a well written and thought provoking book? ... This is a book that is well overdue. I think it will attract a lot of interest, especially from those intrigued by methodology. I look forward to introducing my students to this text and I wish the editors every success.' Vivien Hollis, Professor and Chair, Department of Rehabilitation Medicine, University of Alberta, Canada (Pre-Publication Review Comments)

Reflexivity is a popular tool used to analyse personal, intersubjective and social processes, which shape research projects. It enables researchers, particularly within the qualitative tradition, to acknowledge their role and the situated nature of their research. In the current climate, which sees the popularity of qualitative methods coupled with increased public and professional scrutiny of research, reflexivity provides a means of bolstering greater transparency and quality in research.

This book recognises the considerable value of reflexivity to researchers, and provides a means to navigate this field. The book is foremost a practical guide which examines reflexivity at different stages of the research process. The editors and contributors offer candid approaches to the subject, which supply readers with diverse strategies on how to do reflexivity in practice.

Guided Reflection Advancing Practice

Christopher Johns

'...an important text for practitioners...this text is a valuable tool that develops self-inquiry skills.' Journal of Advanced Nursing

Reflection is widely recognised as an invaluable tool in health care, which provides fresh insights to enable practitioners to develop their own practice and improve the quality of their care. This book introduces the practitioner to the concept of 'Guided reflection', in which the practitioner is assisted by a mentor in a process of self-enquiry, development, and learning through reflection, in order to be fully effective. Guided reflection results in a reflexive narrative, which highlights key issues for enhancing health care practice and professional care. This book uses a collection of such narratives from everyday clinical practice to demonstrate the theory and practicalities of guided construction.

Guided Reflection is invaluable to all healthcare professionals interested in exploring the ways in which guided reflection can help advance and develop health care.

Limiting Harm in Health Care

A Nursing Perspective

Edited By Frank Milligan & Kate Robinson

'A highly original book, where the authors succeed in taking a broad approach to the notion of risk within healthcare. It stipulates a nursing perspective but would be equally valid to a wider inter-professional audience.' Accident and Emergency Nursing

Limiting Harm in Health Care highlights the potential for unnecessary harm in health care practice. This harm is mostly unintentional, but it can result from many different aspects of medical treatment in a wide range of practice areas. Adverse events, events or omissions during clinical care resulting in physical or psychological injury, are increasingly being recognised as significant problems in health care.

Following clarification of the nature and extent of medical harm in health care, separate chapters explore the potential for medical harm in diverse areas of practice. The book includes recommendations for reducing unnecessary harm resulting from adverse events within the expanding boundaries of nursing practice. The reader is challenged to assess the potential risks inherent in the health care system, to reconsider established methods of treatment, and to re-examine professional working relationships.

Effective Interprofessional Education

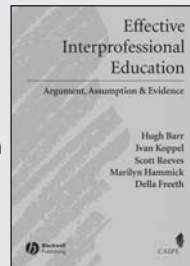

Argument, Assumption and Evidence

Hugh Barr, Della Freeth, Ivan Koppel, Marilyn Hammick & Scott Reeves

Effective Interprofessional Education - Argument, Assumption and Evidence presents a groundbreaking systematic review of the effectiveness of interprofessional education in health and social care. This is accompanied by a wide-ranging critique of interprofessional education, based on experience and informed by sources beyond the evaluations that qualified for inclusion in the review. Synthesising the evidence base for interprofessional education nevertheless remains central, with over 10,000 sources scanned from which 107 studies form the basis for the synthesis.

The book does much more than amass evidence. It revisits conventional wisdom; setting an agenda to help interested parties perform better by applying lessons learned, remedying weaknesses and renewing efforts to address unanswered questions. The first three chapters set the scene for the systematic review and its findings. The middle section of the book articulates the findings of the review. The closing chapters consider values and attitudes, review relevant theoretical perspectives and offer conclusions.

Reflexivity

A Practical Guide for Researchers in Health and Social Sciences

Edited by Linda Finlay & Brendan Gough

'I have enjoyed the reflexive journey very much, learned a lot and been excited to learn more. What else can one say of a well written and thought provoking book? ... This is a book that is well overdue. I think it will attract a lot of interest, especially from those intrigued by methodology. I look forward to introducing my students to this text and I wish the editors every success.' Vivien Hollis, Professor and Chair, Department of Rehabilitation Medicine, University of Alberta, Canada (Pre-Publication Review Comments)

Reflexivity is a popular tool used to analyse personal, intersubjective and social processes, which shape research projects. It enables researchers, particularly within the qualitative tradition, to acknowledge their role and the situated nature of their research. In the current climate, which sees the popularity of qualitative methods coupled with increased public and professional scrutiny of research, reflexivity provides a means of bolstering greater transparency and quality in research.

This book recognises the considerable value of reflexivity to researchers, and provides a means to navigate this field. The book is foremost a practical guide which examines reflexivity at different stages of the research process. Guided Reflection

Advancing Practice

Christopher Johns

'...an important text for practitioners...this text is a valuable tool that develops self-inquiry skills.' Journal of Advanced Nursing

Reflection is widely recognised as an invaluable tool in health care, which provides fresh insights to enable practitioners to develop their own practice and improve the quality of their care. This book introduces the practitioner to the concept of 'Guided reflection', in which the practitioner is assisted by a mentor in a process of self-enquiry, development, and learning through reflection, in order to be fully effective. Guided reflection results in a reflexive narrative, which highlights key issues for enhancing health care practice and professional care. This book uses a collection of such narratives from everyday clinical practice to demonstrate the theory and practicalities of guided construction.

Guided Reflection is invaluable to all healthcare professionals interested in exploring the ways in which guided reflection can help advance and develop health care.

Advanced Qualitative Research for Nursing

Edited by Joanna Latimer

This book presents a range of qualitative up-to-the-minute research developments and methodologies that are uniquely developed for studying nursing. More and more nurses are faced with the imperative that they show how their practices are grounded in research-based evidence. This text shows how qualitative research methodologies have been and are being creatively developed by and within the nursing field. It will enable people to specifically research nursing practice.

Each chapter discusses a particular contemporary approach; reviews the literature in the field, discusses the relevance of the approach to nursing and how the rigor and validity can be attained in both the gathering of research material as well as its analysis and looks at what kinds of claims to knowledge can be made.

Enabling Independence

A Guide for Rehabilitation Workers

Edited by Hazel Mackey & Susan Nancarrow

Designed as a companion text for the variety of support workers in the field of rehabilitation, this book recognises the diversity of roles and array of training and education options; formal routes such as S/NVQ and schemes which are tailored to an individual workplace. Therefore the focus of the book is simply to provide an accessible introduction to rehabilitating the patient, no matter what discipline or service spearheads this activity.

Enabling Independence: A Guide for Rehabilitation Workers provides practical information by reflecting different approaches to the subject of assisting with rehabilitation. The first section introduces the framework for the book and considers the philosophy of enablement. The section is dedicated to 'enhancing function' and details the most commonly required activities of daily living, such as mobility and dressing. This is followed by a 'problem oriented approach' in the third section, which addresses typical problems which support workers are likely to encounter, such as patients who fall or experience fatigue. The final section considers issues in delivering the rehabilitation support, such as team working and supporting carers.

Psychiatric and Mental Health Nursing

The Field of Knowledge

Edited by Stephen Tilley

Psychiatric and Mental Health Nursing: The Field of Knowledge provides an analytical and critical introduction to the current state of knowledge in psychiatric and mental health nursing in the UK.

The first section of the book explores current professional, disciplinary and educational contexts. In the second section leading UK authors from diverse academic settings provide case studies of the knowledge and scientific traditions they draw on to inform their practice, understand patient needs, and foster different aspects of nursing practice.

In the final section the UK authors comment on each other's accounts. Those chapters and comments are then discussed by leading overseas academics to provide an invaluable international perspective. The final stage is a sociologically-informed analysis which identifies sociopolitical trends in order to make sense of the UK and international views. The editor then assesses the potential for intellectual integration and collective advance in psychiatric and mental health nursing.

Critical Care in Childbirth for Midwives

FORTHCOMING

Edited by Mary Billington & Mandy Stevenson

Many maternal deaths are of women who have higher-risk pregnancies, complications or medical conditions that required specialist obstetric or multidisciplinary care. There is a growing trend for critically ill women in childbirth to be cared for by midwives in obstetric high dependency units within the labour ward, rather than being cared for by nurses in ITU.

Critical care is beyond the scope of practice for most midwives however, and midwives require additional training in order to provide effective critical care. This book is a comprehensive, up-to-date guide to the management, support and care of the critically ill women in childbearing for midwives.

Enabling Independence

A Guide for Rehabilitation Workers

Edited by Hazel Mackey & Susan Nancarrow

This book is designed as a companion text for the variety of support workers in the field of rehabilitation. It recognises the diversity of roles and array of training and education options; formal routes such as S/NVQ and schemes which are tailored to an individual workplace. Therefore the focus of the book is to provide an accessible introduction to rehabilitating the patient, no matter what discipline or service spearheads this activity.

Enabling Independence: A Guide for Rehabilitation Workers provides practical information by reflecting different approaches to the subject of assisting with rehabilitation. The first section introduces the framework for the book and considers the philosophy of enablement. The section is dedicated to 'enhancing function' and details the most commonly required activities of daily living, such as mobility and dressing. This is followed by a 'problem oriented approach' in the third section, which addresses typical problems which support workers are likely to encounter, such as patients who fall or experience fatigue. The final section considers issues in delivering the rehabilitation support, such as team working and supporting carers.
