Audio-Forum offers the world's largest selection of audio and video self-instructional language courses — 300+ courses in 125 languages. For more than 30 years we have been the language source, with more than a million satisfied customers. We hope you will try one of our courses; it's risk-free, for we offer a full refund within 30 days.

Most of our full-length courses were developed by the U.S. State Department's Foreign Service Institute (FSI) specifically for our diplomats. Their method is basic: native-born speakers are recorded. Then you repeat during pauses provided; then you hear the language phrase repeated.

You proceed at your own pace, often while doing something else, like driving or walking the dog, learning from a tireless teacher who will repeat as often as necessary for you to get it right. You'll be astonished at how quickly you'll start thinking in the language, avoiding tedious translation.

If you want more information or have questions, please call customer service to talk to a live and knowledgeable person. Our web site, www.audioforum.com, has detailed information about all the products listed in this catalog, plus new and other materials.

"Critical Languages" College-Level CD-ROM Series

Each of these sets, developed by the University of Arizona, consists of 2 CD-ROMs, and is the equivalent of a full textbook and workbook, including:

- 20 lessons with up to 45 dialogs and readings
- as many as 10,000 native speaker audio recordings
- up to 45 native speaker video clips
- a variety of interactive exercises, audio phonetics training, graphics, and extensive grammatical and cultural notes.

Users easily review words and pronunciations, and access five types of exercises—multiple choice, fill-in-the-blank, audio flash-card, pronunciation, and listening dictation—to test and improve their knowledge. Learners can record and play back their own voices, then compare their pronunciation with that of the native speaker.

These classroom-tested lessons allow learners to see, hear, and speak in the target language using natural native speech as their model. Ideal in conjunction with any beginning language course, or usable independently if the learner has no access to other instruction. Because the lessons offer natural language and exercises at variable speed and complexity, they are also ideal for sustenance, review, and ear training for those who have already studied the language. PC only.

"No-Time" LANGUAGE COURSES

This unusual method uses no text or printed materials. You learn by listening to recordings while driving, cooking, gardening, walking, or doing some other monotonous task. You give only time that you are already devoting to something else you are doing. That's why it requires No-Time!

There is extensive vocabulary and conversation practice, plus an explanation of the language's structure and grammar. Courses consist of two hours each of conversation, speaking, and vocabulary, with the eight-hour programs containing additional vocabulary. In just 40 minutes a day for one month, you can learn a two-hour segment.

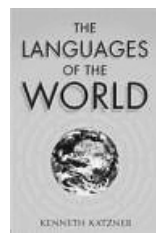

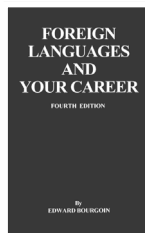

Before you know it, you will begin acquiring vocabulary and comprehend sentence structure by hearing it only—and it does work!
